Civic Leaders Favor Bay Area Improvement

Three Special Civic Committees Decide on Working Sub-committee

Selection of a sub-committee to work for Ocean Beach community in the post-war plans for the improvement of Mission Bay area and the beach near Ocean Beach featured a joint meeting of three special committees that had been named previously by the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis club and the Community Civic committee, held at the Sand-Oster Clinic building Tuesday evening. Rev. J. F. Roberts called the meeting to order, presided and outlined the objects of the meeting and what the group hopes to achieve for this community particularly in the matter of the contemplated improvements for the Mission Bay area.

The joint meeting went on record heartily approving the improvement of Mission Bay and environs without, however, committing itself to any particular plan. Rather the group consensus of opinion seemed to be that they should be in a receptive mood for getting all information possible on what the city, the state and the army engineers are planning for post-war construction in this area.

In view of the size of the group, decision was reached to have a working sub-committee of three to function as a fact-finding, community opinion-testing and acting-in-conference-with-the-public-officials committee. Dr. W. B. Oster was drafted to act as chairman of this sub-committee and was authorized to select at least two assistants to help him.

Consensus of the sentiment expressed at the meeting was that the group is in favor of co-operating with the city officials and backing them in their efforts for the improvement of the Mission Bay area while at the same time functioning to the end that the best interests of the Ocean Beach community be not overlooked in the plans to be carried out.

Nearly all of the following 15 men and women, who had been previously named to represent the three civic groups, participated in Tuesday's meeting.

Chamber of Commerce—John E. Loftus, Earl Shaw, Dan Moss, Jerry Sullivan, J. R. Lownes and Frank F. Swan.

Kiwanis club—Rollin E. Reed, Milton Lancaster, Dr. W. B. Oster, John A. Titlow and Clarence Swenson.

Community Civic committee—J. F. Roberts, Martin Murphy and the Mesdames D. C. Muchmore, Paul Hedrickson, Martha McIntosh and Lorraine Gerhardt.

North Shore Tops County's Boy Scout Districts

A meeting of the North Shore district Boy Scout leaders was held on Monday at the Log Cabin on Sunset Cliffs blvd., with approximately 20 adult leaders present. They were under the leadership of Leroy Wright II, chairman of the North Shore district. This district has increased 54.9 percent during the eight months ended Aug. 31 and is leading all other districts in San Diego county by more than 23 percent increase of membership, according to the county headquarters report for August.

A new "Court of Honor" has been established at the Point Loma Community church to accommodate troops 13, 24 and 145 as it has been found impossible to handle all the applications for advancement at the present "courts."

Troop 9, Azure Vista, held its first meeting of the fall season Wednesday, Sept. 20, under the leadership of O. Outland, assistant scoutmaster, and Dana Roe, chairman of the scout troop committee. There were nine scouts present and two recruits present.

Lt. Tucker Tells Parents of His Injury in France

The following is an extract from a letter from Lieut. Leslie Tucker to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Tucker of 5031 Santa Monica ave., which arrived last week:

"Guess you know we went over to France some time ago. They gave us a warm welcome by shooting at us and acting like a lot of fillbred 'Krauts.' Well, we blasted right back at them plenty.

"I was beat up and was back in England by June 23. I always said I had the best men in the world in my outfit and they proved it in action and in their loyalty to me or I'd not be here to tell you about it.

"At present I'm o.k. but was in bad shape for a while. The good Lord surely held my hand all the way and I guess your prayers were answered this time — mine were.

"I should be ready for some more fun (but it's no fun) soon. Now that I'm o.k. I'll tell you where I got hit. To start with an explosion from a shell knocked me for a loop, wounding my right leg but not breaking it. Later, a long splinter went through my lower left side and lodged in my right chest. It hit my left lung, my diaphragm and cut me up considerably. Some hours later four of my men sneaked through to get me and they just about had me out when I took three machine-gun slugs in my left arm, well spaced, too—one in my wrist, one at my elbow and one in my shoulder but none hit a bone. None of the men carrying me were hit, thank goodness, and I sure owe my skin to these four men. I've had the best of treatment and its but a matter of time now. All I got out of France with was a bad back. I hope my mail will catch up with me some day."

Lieut. Arthur Tucker, brother of the above, has been promoted to captain and is attached to the second army air corps at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Legion Post Aid For Service-men Being Arranged

Clyde A. Wright Post 433 of the American Legion is setting up an agency for the aid of service-men in Ocean Beach. Discussion on the matter was a feature of the September meeting of the Post, held Thursday evening at the Woman's Club-house, 2160 Bacon st.

The plan is to provide information and help to all service-men whether members of the Legion or not, announces Earl Shaw, post commander. "We especially have in mind right now the new G.I. Bill, recently passed by congress, and aim to inform service-men of their rights under the bill and also under any other beneficial legislation that may be passed," the post commander stated.

He has appointed Capt. Buritt S. Mills as the post service officer. This new officer will be glad to help on all service matters, says ommander Shaw, and will provide information on all benefits available to service-men. They are invited to see Capt. ills at his address of 4936 Newport ave., Ocean Beach.

High School to Hold "Know Your School" Program

"Know Your Schoool" is the interesting theme of the Point Loma high school's assembly program set for Thursday, Oct. 5, at 9:10 and again at 9:50.

With the enrollment figures showing that approximately one-half of the student body are new students at Pt. Loma, it is a challenge for the corps of commissioners who guide the student government of the school. These students hope to acquaint the new students with the "workings" of the educational plant and to review for the old Point Lomans some of the principal factors important to the smooth running of the student government.

Those who will appear on the program include Bill Foran, commissioner of general affairs; Wesley Kissel, commissioner of finances; Anne Parrish, commissioner of cultural affairs; Merlyn Broiles, commissioner of boys' activities; Dorothy Shepherd, commissioner of girls' activities; Joanne Sikes, commissioner of girls' athletics; Donald Macbeth, commissioner of interscholastic athletics, and Claire Jones, commissioner of publications. The program will depict a commission meeting where each representative of the Associated Student Body is giving a report to the commissioner of general affairs.

Students in the stage design class have effected an appropriate set of the regular commission room. Each student in the class made a design and the class voted on the ones best planned. Alvan Mitchell's sketch was chosen as best with Hale Hamilton's as second. Best features from each are to be used.

USO Presents Pin Sunday for Volunteer Service

Ocean Beach USO, at a buffet supper held Sunday evening at the USO rooms, presented pins signifying long periods of volunteer service. Mrs. Lloyd Greeson, vice-chairman of the USO committee, made the presentations, giving to Miss Pat Coakley the 1000-hour pin for 1000 hours of service at the local club.

To Mrs. Katherine Roland and Miss Marjorie Stark she presented 500-hour pins, signifying each had performed 500 hours of similar service.

On Monday evening, at the regular meeting of the USO senior hostesses, reports were given by the various chairmen.

"What's Buzzin" is among the missing in The News this week due to the illness of our columnist, Cherie. Here's hoping that she will recover pronto and be on the job again by next week for the benefit of her many readers who tell us that they watch for and read her column every week.

Kiwanis Club Elects Officers For Next Year

Ocean Beach Kiwanis club elected officers for the ensuing year at the meeting of Tuesday, held at the Woman's clubhouse. Results of the ballotting showed the election of Jerry Sullivan for president, Martin Murphy for vice-president and Henry Holman for treasurer, the last named being re-elected. Speaker for the evening was Carl Schroder, president of the Mission Bay Chamber of Commerce, introduced by Tom Plant, program chairman. Speaking on "Development of Mission Bay," Schroder traced the history of the improvements made, gave considerable credit for them to the Mission Bay State Park association and declared that if this bay area "is properly developed it will attract millions of tourists here in the decades to come."

He expressed opposition to any plan for the removal of the bridge now connecting Ocean Beach and Mission Beach, declaring that before this bridge was put in there was no Mission Beach, and that since then both Ocean Beach and Mission Beach have grown rapidly. Elimination of the bridge also would mean the loss of two bus lines, he said. He added, however, that if a better bridge were installed there he would be in favor of taking out the old.

Visitors at the meeting were Fred J. Tucker, a guest of Martin Murphy, and R. A. Mills, a guest of Dr. W. B. Oster.

Hemphill Had 80 Combat Missions Against Japs

L. W. (Pete) Hemprill, 26, of San Diego, formerly a chief aviation pilot—a veteran of 80 combat flying missions against the Japanese in the Central Pacific—has been commissioned an ensign, in the United States Navy, the Eleventh Naval District announced today.

Ensign Hemphill served as co-pilot and pilot in Squadron VB-142 which, with its fast Ventura, two-engine medium bombers, effectively paralyzed bases in the Marshalls with 325 bombing sorties.

During his seven month tour of duty Ensign Hemphill participated in 20 strikes, 58 patrols and two strafing missions. The major portion of the attacks were of the hazardous low-level variety, made at night under extremely adverse weather conditions.

"One plane returned from a bombing attack with branches of a palm tree caught in its bomb-bay doors," Ensign Hemphill said in describing a flight made at a very low altitude.

Ensign Hemphill recently returned for a rest and re-assignment. He resides at 5172 W. Pt. Loma blvd., Ocean Beach, with his wife and two children, Allan, 5, and Sharon Lee, 2. rs. Hemphill is the manager of the Hotel Ocean Village.

Ocean Beach Man Killed in Freak Shooting Accident

Percival Alexander Smock, 3806 Voltaire st., Ocean Beach, was the victim of a freak shooting accident Sunday while fishing off the San Diego coast, and died in the U. S. Naval hospital the same afternoon. LaVerne Edward Hinkley, alias Don Edward Carlton, who had been held on a charge of involuntary manslaughter, was ordered released Monday by Ronald Abernethy, assistant U. S. attorney, the evidence showing that the shooting was accidental.

Smock was bending over a stove while Hinkley was shooting a 22-caliber rifle over Smock's head at seals and sea lions to keep them away from the boat's fishing nets. Smock happened to straighten up at that instant and received a bullet through the head.

A navy patrol plane flew the injured man to shore and he was rushed from there by ambulance to the hospital.

Allied Columns Thrust Toward Industrial Belt in Rhineland; U. S. Carries War to Philippines

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Belgian pedestrians stand by as U. S. medical corps men dress wounds of German soldiers caught in withering machine gun fire.

EUROPE:

Sight Rhineland

Quickly catching their breath after their drive across France and Belgium, the valiant U. S. First and Third armies renewed their offensive against a reorganized enemy in a supreme effort to knock the Germans out of the war this year.

While the Nazis regrouped behind their vaunted Siegfried line, or west wall, Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' First army and Lieut. Gen. George Patton's Third rolled forward again, with the former's strong armored forces thrusting against the fortress city of Aachen, gateway to the rich industrial Rhine valley to the northeast, with its great manufacturing centers of Cologne, Dusseldorf, Duisberg and Essen.

As General Hodges' troops gathered strength for their smash into the Rhineland, General Patton's men worked their way beyond the bitterly defended Moselle river against the rich Saar coal and manufacturing country, which curves off sharply to the east with the winding German border.

To the south of General Patton's Third army, Lieut. Gen. Alexander Patch's Seventh drew up its ranks before the historic Belfort Gap, great open plain lying between the Vosges mountains and the Swiss border and leading into southern Germany. As the Seventh army with its complement of French troops smashed at the enemy here, it encountered stiffening resistance and heavy artillery fire from the hills beyond.

As the U. S. First, Third and Seventh armies smashed against Germany's western frontier in a quick move to end the war, British troops worked their way slowly against bitter opposition through southeastern Holland, where the enemy contested their advance in strength in an effort to protect the far northern flank of their Siegfried line, reportedly its weakest link.

Do or Die

As the reinforced U. S. Fifth and British Eighth armies threw their full strength at Germany's Gothic line in northern Italy, guarding the rich agricultural and industrial valley of the Po, Nazi Field Marshal Albert Kesselring went all out in an effort to hold his ground.

With his 19 divisions of roughly 250,000 men outnumbered by the Allied forces, Kesselring was placing his chief reliance on the mountainous terrain, and other improvised obstacles dotting the rugged countryside, such as tank traps and buried tank gun nests, etc.

U. S. officers looked to "tough fighting" ahead.

Utilize Manpower

With manpower always Russia's strategic military trump, the Reds were making full use of it on the eastern front, where four major actions were in progress against the Germans' shortened, but strained, defense lines.

In the north, the Reds were grinding their way forward against the enemy's stiff East Prussian lines, and attacking heavily around Warsaw with armored columns that were drawing a steady stream of Germans into the fight.

To the south, strong Russian forces held up about 100 miles from Germany proper, switched their attack to the mountain passes leading into Czechoslovakia, while deeper in the Balkans, the Reds were pressing on Hungary's Transylvanian wheat fields.

MISCELLANY

EMPLOYMENT: Of the 53,170,000 persons employed in the U. S., 18,440,000 are women, the bureau of census reported. Although 3,000,000 women were added to payrolls during the 12-month period ending in August, 1943, there was no appreciable increase in the following year. As a whole, the civilian labor force decreased 1,000,000 from July to August, 1944.

CROPS:

Huge Harvest

With August rains checking the serious deterioration of the crop in the drought area east of the Mississippi, the U. S. department of agriculture predicted a bumper corn harvest of 3,101,319,000 bushels for 1944, second largest on record.

With the wheat crop set at an all-time high of 1,115,402,000 bushels, oats production at 1,190,540,000, barley at 290,036,000, soybeans at 179,024,000 and sorghums at 149,962,000, a total grain harvest of over 6,000,000,000 bushels was predicted.

Because of the bumper crops and reduced feeding, the live stock and poultry industry should find sufficient grain available throughout the coming months, the USDA declared.

Markets Dip

With the USDA reporting excellent crop prospects, prices on leading grain markets dipped, with only wheat bearing up under purchases of the Commodity Credit corporation and information that the agency was interested in deferred shipments.

PACIFIC:

Homecoming

Two and one-half years after the Japanese over-ran the Philippines, U. S. naval forces under Admiral Chester Nimitz's command have come back to subject enemy installations on the islands to withering aerial and artillery fire.

Adm. Nimitz

At the same time, marine and army assault forces under Admiral Nimitz's command swept ashore on the Palau islands, 600 miles east of the Philippines, while units under Gen. Douglas MacArthur's leadership invaded the Moluccas, 300 miles south of the Philippines, thus establishing a menacing steel ring around the islands.

Presaging major operations against the Philippines guarding the enemy's vital supply lines from the Indies to the west, U. S. naval aircraft swept over the southern string of islands, lashing at enemy planes which had been carefully husbanded to resist U. S. advances. Big battleships, riding with smaller cruisers and destroyers, raked enemy shipping, using water routes to supply the disconnected jumble of islands.

PETROLEUM:

Draw on Stocks

With military requirements approximating 800,000 barrels daily out of total production of 2,000,000, there is little possibility of an easing in gas rationing until after the end of the European war, the Office of War Information declared.

The tightness in the gasoline situation exists even though the output of crude oil for petroleum production has averaged an all-time high of 4,470,000 barrels daily, natural gas output has approximated 269,000 barrels daily, and imports are above the 1941 level.

With demand outrunning supply, the industry has been compelled to dip into reserve stocks at a rate of 2,500,000 barrels of crude monthly, OWI said, bringing holdings to the lowest level since 1922.

Hidden Resources

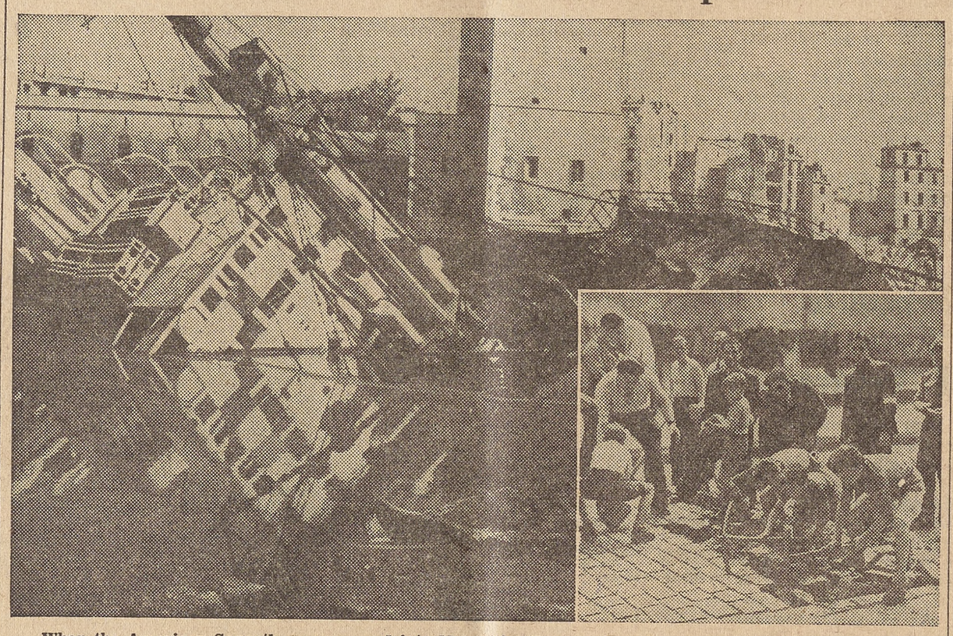
Although present U. S. oil reserves are estimated at 20 billion barrels, our known oil in the ground actually is nearer 100 billion barrels, much of which could be recovered by some new method or if higher prices were established, this is the opinion of experts.

No nation has been completely explored for all of its oil possibilities, and in countries of greater area, only a small fraction of existing resources have been tapped, the experts added.

Yanks Enter Germany as Siegfried Fort Falls

Two spearheads of the U. S. First army, under Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, enter Germany south of Aachen and beyond Trier, as Siegfried fort falls to the Allies. Photo shows the spearhead of tanks stretching out into the horizon across Flanders field as they enter German territory. In the first push they reached the outskirts of Aachen, meeting with opposition within the Siegfried line.

France Wrecked as German Troops Retreat



When the American Seventh army moved into Marseille, France, they found ships scuttled in the harbor as well as the city looted and buildings, bridges and rail terminals destroyed. In Paris the women and children had ripped up the paving blocks from the streets to build barricades behind which they fought for liberation of their capital before Allied forces entered the city to help them.

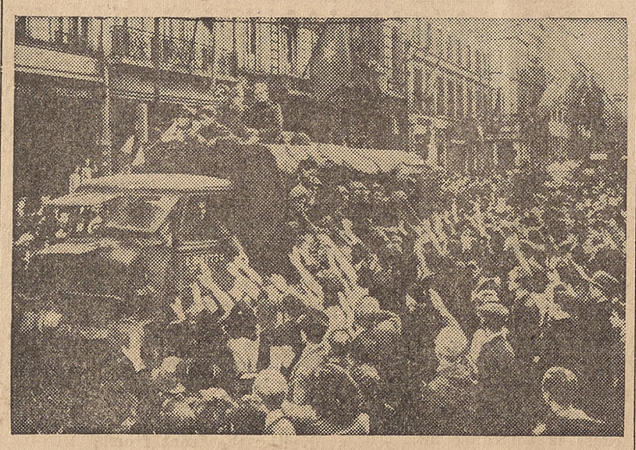
Italian Waffle-Like Trenches

The slit trenches that cut up an area "some place in Italy" in a waffle-like pattern are being used by the Air WACs stationed near the headquarters of the 12th air force in Italy. This new type of trench is said to offer considerably more protection, and is harder to hit from air.

First in Germany

Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, commander of the American First army, which had the honor to be the first of the Allied forces to make a permanent penetration into Germany. General Hodges' troops were also the first Yanks to enter Paris after the French underground and fought off the Nazis.

Liberators Who Came Home



Among the British forces that liberated Brussels, capital of Belgium, was a brigade of Belgians, members of which are being given an enthusiastic welcome home here by the populace of Brussels as they drove into the city. They had escaped to England, and there had been organized and trained under their own colors.

A Mechanical 'Whiz'

Jack Butler, 11, of Chicago, assembled a carburetor of several hundred parts in one hour—a record for an expert. In a demonstration at the Bendix Aviation corporation plant he used only a new "exploded view" diagram guide.

DIFFERENCE IN REACTION TO WAR

In my home town, a rural community, the people have taken the war seriously. They have worked at the job of winning; they have helped the farmers plant and harvest food; they have made many sacrifices; they have taken seriously the job of collecting scrap and waste that have been called for by the government. To the rural people, winning the war is the one thing of first importance. It regulates their daily activities. For them it is a time of work and sacrifice, not of play and spending.

During the summer I returned to the old home town of Chicago. The time was just after the appearance in a London newspaper of a critical piece, written by a London reporter, depicting the Chicago war spirit, or lack of it, as he saw conditions in that metropolis. The newspapers of Chicago were much "het up" over that piece. They denounced the reporter as being unfair, as not having investigated, as judging the people of the city by what he saw in a few night clubs.

What I saw in Chicago was what that London reporter had seen in Chicago, and I did not see it in the night clubs. I saw it on the streets; the mad rush of a money maddened people in their wild effort to spend the surplus money the war had given them. The stores were jammed with people buying any and everything, regardless of price or quality, the merchants were offering. People of all classes were buying things for which most could have no urgent need. It was simply a case of having money and wanting to spend it regardless of what they bought. It was prosperity run rampant.

I saw the same thing in the better class of Chicago hotels and restaurants. Champagne—American, to be sure—flowed more freely than in prewar days; blues singers rendered sprightly and slightly off-color ditties for enthusiastic audiences, many of whom were of the war's newly rich. There was no evidence that our men and boys were fighting for the nation's continued existence.

Men and boys of the metropolitan centers are in the fighting lines just as those of the rural communities. Both figure in the casualty lists, but there is a difference in the effect. In the city the family next door has lost a son, but that family receives no evidence of sympathy from families around them. There is, in the city, a lack of that neighborly human touch so characteristic of the people of rural communities. That is one of the differences between the people of the cities and the country. It is that neighborly sympathy of the country that brings home to us more of the war's realities, while in the city it is only when war strikes directly at the home that war's terrors are realized.

Metropolitan centers subscribe their quota to the war loans; contribute their part to the Red Cross, USO and other war funds, but after that visit to Chicago I am convinced the people of the cities do not feel the same element of responsibility for the war effort, that same desire for a speedy end, as do the people of the rural communities.

TIME CHANGES RAILROAD TRAVEL

TRAVELING FROM THE WEST COAST into Chicago, on a streamlined train, fitted with all the conveniences of these times, and making an average speed of 60 miles an hour, including stops and mountain grades, reminded me of train travel of an earlier day. As a boy, living in the little town of Ainsworth, Iowa, a daily pleasure was to sit on the depot platform and watch the Rock Island "Rocket" whizz by. That was one of the crack trains of the West of 1880. It did not stop at Ainsworth, it did not even hesitate, but went through town at its full terrific speed of 20 miles an hour. It was the fast train between Chicago and Kansas City, a run of some 500 miles, made in about 20 hours. Its half dozen, stove heated, open end coaches, and that wonder of wonders, a Pullman sleeping car on the end, represented the best transportation money could then buy. How the transportation world has moved since 1880. The advance is the difference between the "Rocket" of those days with the perfection of today. It is an advance we can credit to the American system of free enterprise.

THERE MAY BE A REASON, that we mortals cannot fathom, for the employment, by the Federal government, of thousands of men to count automobiles on the nation's highways. This at a time when the farmers are crying for help, in the harvesting of crops, to replace those who have been drafted that the full force of the army and navy may be maintained.

It's Simple Furniture With Frills, Ruffles

IF YOU have been wondering if quaintness, frills and ruffles were going into the decorating ash can after the war, the answer is—no. There will be many strictly modern rooms but there will be rooms also in which all the war years' pent-up longing will burst forth in the most romantic versions of the traditional Home, sweet Home with variations according to taste.

Period themes and quaintness will be stepped up to have a dramatic quality. Modern ideas will creep in and add to this effect. Simple furniture will be built in and fabrics will be cut and sewn especially to fit the spaces they are to fill. The bed curtains for the slanting wall in the sketch are an example—and the triangular shaped window curtains to give extra fullness. Frills will be even fuller than those of our dreams, and many a homemaker who never before used her sewing machine attachments will be learning the mysteries of the ruffler and hemmer.

NOTE—Why not start your dream room now with a skirted blanket chest like the one in this sketch? It is grand to have extra covers handy on chilly nights and the padded top makes a comfortable seat. Lizard Gunman

There exists a lizard "gunman" that shoots with a jet of blood.

This remarkable marksman, the Arizona spiny lizard, when on the defensive, resorts to shooting, projecting with startling suddenness and great force a thin stream of blood from the corner of each eye. Though the reptile's attack is of a comparatively harmless nature, it is, nevertheless, most disarming and the aggressor very seldom stops to make further inquiry.

After this performance the lizard turns on its back and "shams dead," remaining motionless until it has recuperated from its efforts.

A SPECIAL WEEK FOR NEWSPAPERS

For years newspapers have been boosting special weeks of many kinds, to which space has been freely given. Now within the past few years, someone has decided that newspapers were entitled to one special week of their own.

Next week, Oct. 1 to 8, will be observed throughout the country as national newspaper week. From the president on down, various public officials have issued proclamations and statements in support of the idea, and in praise of the free press of this country, without which democracy is nothing but a pipe dream. Many newspapers are using the opportunity to have heart-to-heart talks with their readers, telling of their service rendered as well as of unusual problems met in time of war.

Newspaper problems really have mounted since Pearl Harbor. Particularly tough has been the problem of getting sufficient help because thousands of printers and reporters have been necessarily diverted to the military. Newspapers, like most individuals, have been forced by these conditions to make sacrifices and adjustments and to cut down on paper used as well as on service rendered.

The Ocean Beach News, like many other papers, has been obliged to curtail plans for improvement. We wish to take this occasion to thank the many Ocean Beach folks for their patience, for their cooperation and for their kind words of praise that have been given us for our efforts.

Above all we are trying to make it a community newspaper, a home newspaper, for we realize that to a large degree The News must carry the torch for Ocean Beach. No other newspaper in the world is, or can be, as much interested in promoting this community and its community projects. Other newspapers have their own projects to boost, and none of them can be more than secondarily interested in furthering the special community interests here.

As for the war effort, in most newspapers since Pearl Harbor more than half of the news and editorial columns have been devoted to support of that effort. Your newspaper has been the voice of the war bond drives, of the various branches of the military, of the Red Cross, the USO, the Civilian Defense, and other wartime organizations and agencies. This space has been given freely and patriotically, realizing as we do, that our victory in this war is the paramount issue. We are confident that our many readers understand the situation and appreciate that as a result the space and effort to be devoted to home news and advertising copy must necessarily be reduced temporarily.

CONSTITUTION DAY

That "grand old document"—the Constitution of the United States—celebrated its 157th anniversary on Sept. 17.

Every American can well feel proud of our Constitution for no nation has ever had a better chart of government to guide it.

Although shaped by men who little dreamed of the mighty nation that was to stem from the original 13 states, the Constitution has nevertheless proved flexible in meeting the changing needs of the decades without departing from its basic principles of liberty and representative government.

But it is necessary that we remain vigilant to guard against any encroachment of our rights which are guaranteed under the Constitution. Personal freedom and free competitive enterprise have been limited by the necessities of war. But we must not permit these limitations to become permanent.

A free economy as well as personal freedom is imperative to the welfare of the nation—and the essence of the Constitution must protect both.

THE RED CROSS IN OCEAN BEACH

By ONA E. PITCOCK

What a wonderful cookie day we had last week. Fifty-seven dozen cookies and eight cakes, made by the Sacajawae Girl Scouts under the supervision of Mrs. Gordon Lilley. The cakes were large and the decorated one we put the candle holders on and placed a birthday card and napkins with it. The hospital in Balboa Park drew the birthday cake as they had a boy who had a birthday that day.

Don't forget to begin picking up articles for our Christmas boxes.

If you want to know what you can send overseas call me at B-5639. I will tell you but I only have one copy. I have plenty of copies of what you can give here at home.

Abbey's Great Dane Dog Home From The War

Dogs as well as service-men are now coming home from the war and already at least one well-known dog in Ocean Beach is home. During the past week he has been in the lime-light and drew from Naomi Baker, newspaper woman the following human interest story in the Tribune-Sun:

"The only sentry duty I'm going to do from now on is around the house."

Honorably discharged from the K-9 corps after nine months of duty with the coast guard, Hamlet, a Great Dane, owned by the James B. Abbey family stretched lazily on the sunny porch at 4430 Long Branch ave Ocean Beach today and tailthumped: "It's swell to be a civilian again."

"Just before I got my honorable discharge papers, they sent me to a retraining center, but I'll admit that I was worried about how I'd fit into home life again," Hamlet confessed. "I suppose it's like that with anyone back from the war. I cut loose and ran when I got out of the express crate, but as soon as my peacetime C.O. brought me home and I saw the kids, I was glad to be back.

"I wish Nancy and Peter didn't have to go to school. I'm waiting for them to come home now; in the meantime I've had a grand time with Pepita and James. They are too little for school thank goodness.

"I learned a lot, though, when I went to school at the dog center at San Carlos. I'm supposed to forget some of my training now, but a note on my discharge papers told the Abbeys how well I obey the commands, 'Heel, sit, down and stay.' They said that part might be useful to remember."

From head to tail is quite a stretch with Hamlet. He can stand and place his front paws on Abbey's shoulder. Seven years ago, Abbey carried him home from La Mesa in his overcoat pocket. The pup's mournful expression caused the family to name him Hamlet, the gloomy Dane.

"Most of the kids of this neighborhood have come to see me," Hamlet continued. "They think I am a hero. And what do you think The family doesn't have me sleep outside as I did before I went to war. I sleep in the boss' bedroom. The minute I got home they fed me a whole roast they had paid ration points for, because they hadn't expected me so soon and hadn't had time to shop for horse-meat. That's what I ate in the K-9 corps.

"I was one of the first San Diego dogs to enlist with Dogs for Defense and one of the first to return."

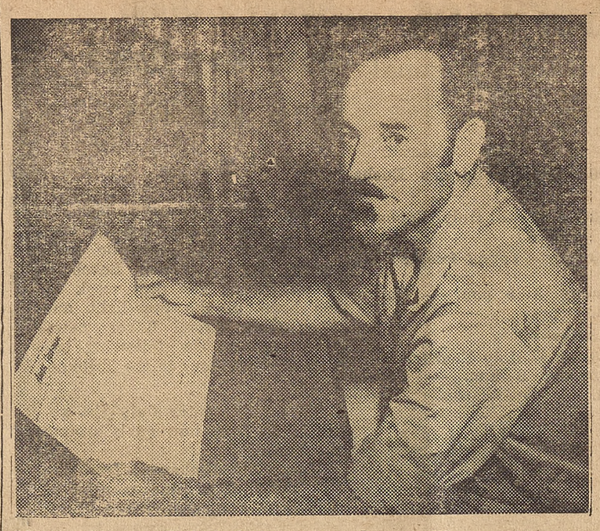
ASK MARINES ABOUT TICHACEK OF OCEAN BEACH



Marine Master Technical Sergeant James Thomas Tichacek, China hand, one of the Marine Corps' best-known band masters and veteran of two campaigns against the Japs in this war, studies music for his band at a South Pacific base.

Story of Marine Tichacek Written Special for News

(By T/Sgt. Paul G. Long)

This is a story about Tichacek of Ocean Beach, 25 years a marine, special to The News, written by a former member of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times staff.

Somewhere in the South Pacific—(Delayed)—Ask the old marines about Tichacek. They know him from 'way back. Back to the days when he conducted the Shanghai symphony orchestra, rode a pony through Manchuria, chased bandits in Santo Domingo and wrote an article on voodooism for a New York City newspaper.

Now, after two campaigns against the Japanese in this war he's headed back for the States.

Master Technical Sergeant James Thomas Tichacek is a bandmaster but in the Marine Corps they don't hit defended beaches with music. When the heat is on there are grim jobs for everybody. On New Britain's Cape Gloucester, his band was guarding the command post and carrying the wounded to the rear when he was hit in the shoulder. He continued directing the stretcher parties. It was his third wound in his quarter-century as a marine.

Guadalcanal was more exciting. Tichacek was in charge of evacuating 27 wounded men from the front lines in a boat. The boat ran out of gasoline and drifted below the Jap lines, into the naval engagement of Nov. 12, 1942. For eight hours they drifted, with shot and shell and fighting ships all around them. Three of the wounded men were lost that dark night. It was four o'clock in the morning when they were finally rescued.

"First thing I did next morning was to look at all the gray hair I had acquired," said the 41-year-old Czech-born marine.

In the regiment where he served for the past two years, Tichacek at different times was police sergeant, first sergeant and sergeant major. That means he can be tough when the occasion calls for toughness, and that he knows "the book," the multifarious regulations that govern the Marine Corps.

He left Czecho-Slovakia at the age of four. His boyhood ambition was to be a marine, and he began pestering the nearest recruiting sergeant at his southern Illinois home almost as soon as he was in long pants. He had two years at the University of Illinois, then was accepted for enlistment in 1919.

Figure them at four in a row, and you'll find Tichacek with three banks of ribbons, and two more to spare. That's for his 25 years in the Marine Corps, in Stateside stations, Mexico, Central America, China and lastly the South Pacific.

He had served under nearly all the Corps' living generals. With the late Maj. General Smedley D. Butler he made the 60-mile marine conditioning hike from Quantico, Va., to Gettysburg, Pa. He taught a famous marine colonel of this war how to fire his rifle.

Tichacek has always been a leader in Marine Corps musical circles. At the San Diego Marine base, he built up a 32-piece orchestra into a 175-piece symphonic band. He organized the first string ensemble in the Marine Corps, the first Fleet Marine Force band and its first drum and bugle corps.

It was esteemed a great honor in the old days to guest-conduct Shanghai's symphony orchestra. Jose Iturbi, Leopold Stokovski and the other big names in music held that baton as guests. Tichacek who had his own band at Shanghai, conducted the famous symphony several times.

He witnessed the sinking of the Panay in the Yangtze river from nearby ship and wrote a song about it.

Back on the West coast after war's beginning, he helped originate the Marine Corps' own radio program, "Halls of Montezuma."

Now that it's furlough time, Tichacek is going to visit his old friends at Parris Island, S. C., and San Diego, the nation's big marine bases where mellowing old salts that served with him in the tropics and China are training new marines to go on with the war.

He'll head for home first, of course. His wife, Xenia Mickey, lives at 1841 Ebers st., Ocean Beach. Then he'll go to Summit, Ill. to see his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Tichacek. There will be a family reunion, and it's a big family, what with his six brothers and two sisters. Two of the brothers are in the service and won't be there. John is in the navy, George in the army.

Civilian Defense

DISTRICT No. 7
Bayview 6101

Well—have we been receiving things this week—through Mrs. K. W. Johnson, sector leader of A. A. we received the following: from Mrs. Evelyn C Gregg; 25 jig saw puzzles, most of them practically new and can be used as individually wrapped gifts and a box of junk jewelry. From Mrs Viola Sepin, also of sector A.A. a box of junk jewelry and a number of used greeting cards, various kinds. The patients at the hospitals use these cards in a number of ways and it gives them something to do with their hands cutting out the various pictures designs and sayings.

Also from Mrs. Johnson, $5 towards making up several Christmas boxes and a $5 check she received from Mrs. Mae Heidbring of Denver, Colo., former sector leader of A. A. Our many thanks for these contributions and same will be used in getting various articles to put into our big Christmas boxes for the patients at the hospitals here at Christmas time.

From Mrs. E. L. Sweezey of Sector E, we received 20 pocket size mystery thrillers. We can never have too many of these books as the boys enjoy this type of book immensely and pass them around from one to another continually.

Speaking of books, should you have any other novels that would be of interest to the service-men or women, these may be taken to our local library, noting that they are for the folks in the service.

Save your waste fats and paper—these are still needed. Your next waste paper curb pick-up date for Ocean Beach, Postal Zone No. 7 is on October 9. A number of people have been placing the paper on the curbs after the truck has gone by. In order to avoid this, place your bundles of paper and old magazines, tied up now.

Late magazines of any kind should not be put into the waste paper pick-up but should be turned in for use in the hospitals or at the various USO centers. Magazines, such as Reader's Digest, Coronet, Life, Pic, Click, Lood and similar ones don't go out of date and are always acceptable as reading material.

Switch Tires

Processing Peas

Remember that peas can be processed safely and successfully only in a pressure cooker. Use tender young peas, wash pods and shell only enough to fill containers to be processed at one time. Wash shelled peas, cover with boiling water and boil two minutes. Pack hot into pint jars or No. 2 cans. Add one-half teaspoon salt and one-half teaspoon sugar, if desired, to each pint. Cover with boiling water. Leave one inch above the liquid in glass jars, one-fourth inch in tin cans. Seal glass jars.

Process at 10 pounds pressure: No. 2 cans 35 minutes, pint jars 45 minutes. Count processing time from the time 10 pounds pressure is reached. When processing is completed, remove pressure cooker from heat. If glass jars are used, let pressure fall slowly to zero and then slowly open the petcock. Remove jars and complete the seal. If No. 2 cans are used, slowly open the petcock when the cooker is removed from heat without waiting for pressure to fall to zero. Release clamps and remove cooker cover. Be careful of steam.

Proper Storage Helps Preserve Protein Foods

The principal protein foods—meat, poultry, fish, eggs and cheese—especially should be used to best advantage because they give energy. Proper storing of these foods is important and will help cut waste.

Store meat cold and covered loosely. Wipe off chops and roasts with a damp cloth just before using. Keep meat for stews, cut-up poultry and ground meat extra cold and cook soon because cut-up meat tends to spoil faster than meat in a piece. Keep cooked meat covered and cold. If serving it sliced or chopped, cut just before using. Poultry should be washed thoroughly inside and out, then dried well and stored very cold until time to cook. Fish should be cooked at once. If it must be stored, wrap it in waxed paper and keep very cold. Be sure to put fish away from other foods that are likely to take the fish odor.

Keep eggs covered and cold. They store best in a covered pan or bowl away from strong-smelling foods. Keep leftover egg yolks by adding just enough cold water to cover. Put egg whites in a jar or dish and cover tightly. Keep in a cold place and use soon.

Cheese also should be kept cold and covered. Serve cottage cheese and other soft cheese soon after buying, as they spoil fast. Hard cheese should be tightly wrapped before storing.

Plan for Local Offices To Aid Demobilization

Vets' and Civilians' Problems Would Be Tackled in Own Communities; Re-Employment Is Major Goal.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

These days it is popular to criticize Democratic methods for their lack of speed. The legislative mills do grind slowly as we have noted, with many of the measures delaying readjustment to the peace to come. But in the case of the first steps toward preparing for demobilization which have brought up such hearty disagreements, it so happens that, quite unobserved by most observers, the machinery has been grinding steadily ahead just the same.

This was achieved by executive order, and, on the surface at least, it appears that work has been done while congress was disagreeing. Since February 24, when the executive order creating it was issued, the Retraining and Reemployment administration has established more than 8,000 information centers which will be the contact point with discharged veterans and war workers. It also erected the framework of a system which can be expanded to take care of the peak demands when demobilization starts in earnest.

These information centers are the vital points of contact between government agencies and the citizen, veteran or civilian who is starting on the road back to peacetime existence.

The philosophy back of this whole readjustment plan is based on the idea that a man or woman can best be served by his own friends and neighbors. The government, local or federal, helps, but the local community whose own prosperity depends on the prosperity and happiness of its members, is the best of guides, philosophers and friends.

The Retraining and Reemployment administration is the child of the Baruch-Hancock report, which is a lengthy document embodying the results of a long study and presented as a suggestion for appropriate legislation. Since the lawmakers were slow in their law-making, the President issued his executive order under his war powers.

He put the new administration under the office of War Mobilization, its head, Mr. Byrnes, named General Hines, head of the Veterans administration, as Administrator of the Retraining and Reemployment setup.

New Agency Works With Other U. S. Bodies

Under General Hines was created a policy board made up of representatives of the various government agencies whose functions fit into the picture, the purpose being to make use of existing government agencies insofar as possible rather than to create new ones. The agencies represented on the board are: labor, federal security, war manpower, selective service, the war department, navy department, war production board.

This board has general supervision of all activities affecting the returned veteran or the discharged war worker and it consults with congress on matters which would promote the processes of readjustment.

Specifically this is a large order for it involves getting jobs, getting the right job for the right man; training for jobs, training the right man for the right job and assuring an expert and sympathetic handling of the process, from the human as well as the economic standpoint. It also deals with all the multifold benefits and rights of the GI Bill of Rights, already dealt with at length in these columns.

The man on whom most of the responsibility for carrying out the administration's work has fallen so far is C. W. Bailey, executive secretary of the policy board.

Following the theory of utilization of existing agencies, the board immediately turned to the three government agencies which were already engaged in activities similar to those, or including those which the R & R has to do, namely, selective service with its 6,500 offices in all parts of the country through which virtually everyone who entered the armed services had to pass; the United States Employment service, with its 1,500 full time offices which have been the main channels carrying the war workers to their jobs, and finally the Veterans administration with its hundred offices with a personnel experienced in handling ex-soldiers' claims since the end of World War I.

Committees were appointed in the various states composed of representatives of these agencies, whose function was to assist in the creation of the information centers. In many states these committees have been able to report that the organization of these smaller groups is now adequate to handle the present load; in other states the completion of the organization is underway. Mr. Bailey tells me that he feels that a national framework has been constructed upon which the complete organization can be raised as demobilization begins and war industries are cut down.

This is the organization which has been functioning under the executive order. It is taken for granted that it will be continued in function if not in exact form, and of course provided with adequate funds for expansion, by current or future legislation. But the point is that in the intermin action has been taken, without working for the legislative bodies to deliberate and adumbrate while the readjustment program merely marked time.

Administration Eager To Make Good Showing

Since the Democratic administration is open to sharp criticism if any phase of the adjustment program drags, considerable effort will be made to show results. Pressure applied to congress to hurry the legislation was exerted, too, with the Republicans perhaps in the less advantageous position since the original measure offered by the administration was considerably altered, first in the senate and later in the house.

When the President was asked for comment on Governor Dewey's charge that the New Deal was afraid of the peace because it was uncertain that the economic problems would be satisfactorily solved, the President merely said we could say that he smiled broadly.

Meanwhile, some members of the administration not sure whether smiles were in order have been out in the field attempting to find out just what has been accomplished toward opening the way to full employment, which is generally admitted to be the one sure answer to the danger of a depression. The work of the Retraining and Reemployment administration if it can show a good record can be an example of one of the first concrete steps.

Reports of the informal investigators have not been made public. We do know that in some communities the local people have responded well. Many energetic mayors and chambers of commerce are ready and anxious to show their local industries the benefit of the possibilities of expansion. They have been active in making plans which will get the returned veteran or warworker a job, or get him in contact with the proper source for training which will make him a potential benefit to the community. In such places the committees are quickly and easily formed and are prepared to function—in some cases are already functioning—effectively.

After all, the federal government, by a unanimous vote in congress, produced the GI Bill of Rights, that welfare program opening a thousand effective channels for human readjustment, physical, moral, intellectual and economic, to normal life, to millions of servicemen. It devolves upon their friends and neighbors to see that their benefits remain the benefits of the community rather than lose them to some more energetic society or, by complete neglect, to oblivion.

Total federal receipts jumped from $22,700,000,000 in fiscal 1943 to $40,500,000,000 in 1944, an increase of 78.7 per cent, according to a recent U. S. treasury report. Analysis of the report by the Federation of Tax Administrators shows that more than $33,000,000,000 of the 1944 total, or 81.4 per cent, was brought in by income and excess profits taxes. All other taxes yielded about $7,500,000,000, almost equaling the total federal receipts in 1941.

Meat Point Pointers . . . Rice Balls in Mushroom Sauce
(See Recipes Below)

Flavorful Meats

You'll be using more of the lower grades of beef as time goes by. Most of the AA and A, top grades of beef, are going to armed forces and utility or lower grade beef will be more available for civilian consumption.

That calls for pulling out the old-fashioned, flavorful recipes that will really make this beef taste good. We used to do, and can still do it as long as we pull the bunny of ingenuity out of the proverbial hat, or cookbook, as the case may be.

Inexpensive cuts of meat can be made tender by several methods.

Round steak can be pounded with a small hammer or mallet to break down the tissues, then braised with liquids and seasonings to savory goodness. Stewing is another good method for cooking this type of meat. Adding tomato juice, spices, mushroom soup and other liquids gives peak flavor.

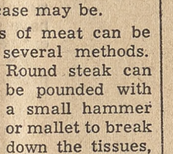
Here are recipes which may be made with utility beef, but which will have just as much flavor as the more expensive cuts:

Swiss Steak.
(Serves 6)
Round or Arm steak, cut 2 inches thick
Flour
Salt and pepper
1 onion, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons lard
2 cups tomatoes
1 carrot, diced
½ cup corn
1 small green pepper, sliced
½ cup water

Mix flour, salt and pepper; pound into steak. Brown steak in lard. Add vegetables and water. Cover pan and cook in slow oven (300 degrees) for 2½ hours. Add more water if needed. Serve with vegetables poured over steak.

Short Ribs With Vegetables.
(Serves 6)
5 pounds short ribs of beef
3 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons lard
8 medium-sized potatoes
8 small onions
4 parsnips
4 carrots

Wipe meat with damp cloth, sprinkle with salt and pepper and brown in hot fat. Add water, cover and allow to simmer an hour. Prepare vegetables. Add whole potatoes, onions, parsnips and carrots cut in half. Season vegetables, cover and continue cooking until vegetables are tender. Serve meat on platter garnished with vegetables.



Lynn Says

Point Pointers: Use low temperatures in cooking meat, regardless of the method. High temperatures shrink meat unnecessarily.

Save all the meat you buy. If a roast is boned at the butchers, bring the bones home and use them for soup.

Different seasonings add interest to meats. Try onion gravy with beef. Mushroom soup, diluted and heated, goes well with lamb. Horseradish adds pep to pot roast or short ribs gravy.

Pork gravy is good with a dash of sage, lamb gravy with a bit of curry.

Leftover vegetables such as peas, carrots, celery, lima beans and green beans added to gravy make it colorful, different and more nourishing.

*Recipe given.

Spiced Beef.
3 pounds chuck steak
½ teaspoon cloves
6 medium-sized onions
½ teaspoon peppercorns
2 tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon allspice
6 bay leaves
12 gingersnaps

Wipe meat with damp cloth. Place in a saucepan and cover with a mixture of half water and half vinegar. Add 2 tablespoons salt, sliced onions, bay leaves and spices. Let stand at least 24 hours. Place on stove and simmer gently until meat is tender. Take meat out and let drain. Strain broth through a sieve and let it come to a boil. Then add gingersnaps which have been softened into a paste with cold water. This will thicken broth so that it will have to be stirred about 3 minutes. Return meat to gravy and let stand for about 15 minutes before serving.

The favorite combination of ham and sweet potatoes takes a new turn in this following recipe:

Ham and Sweet Potato Roll.
(Serves 6)
¾ pound ground ham
½ pound ground pork
½ cup cracker crumbs
1 egg
¾ cup milk
Pepper
2 cups mashed sweet potatoes

Combine all ingredients except potatoes. Spread on waxed paper to ½-inch thickness, making a rectangle about 6 by 10 inches. Spread with seasoned potatoes and roll like a jelly roll. Place in dripping pan and bake 1½ hours in a moderate (350 degree) oven.

Potted Veal With Dumplings.
2 pounds veal shoulder
1 onion
1 quart water
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 cups diced potatoes
6 carrots
4 tablespoons flour
¼ cup cold water

Remove fat and cut meat into 1-inch cubes. Simmer veal and sliced onion for 1 hour. Add salt, pepper, sauce, potatoes and sliced carrots. Continue cooking for 15 minutes longer. Thicken mixture with flour and water. Prepare dumplings and drop by spoonfuls on top of meat. Cover closely and steam 12 minutes.

Dumplings: 1½ cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons lard, ¼ cup milk. Sift flour, measure and sift again with baking powder and salt. Cut in fat and mix to a fine crumb. Add milk and mix to a soft dough.

Many dishes are made better by the addition of mushrooms, or by a mushroom soup that combines both the goodness of the mushroom and a well-blended white sauce. Try:

Rice Balls With Mushroom Sauce.
(Serves 6)
1 pound hamburger
⅓ cup rice
1 10½-ounce can condensed mushroom soup
1 teaspoon salt

Mix together meat, salt and rice which has been washed and drained. Shape into small balls. Brown them in hot fat. Add mushroom soup which has been diluted with an equal amount of water. Cover. Simmer for 1 hour.

Governor Issues Proclamation on Newspaper Week

"California newspapers will from October 1 to 8 participate in the observance of National Newspaper Week.

In recognition of the remargkable wartime record of the American press—a record of service to community, to nation and to the cause of world freedom—it is fitting that the entire citizenry of our state should join in the observance.

"Working as a team — a free people enlightened by a free press —we have met the unprecedented demand of our day in an inspiring manner. Our production record and our fighting record stand as eloquent illustrations of popular understanding of why battles have had to be fought and why victory must be complete.

"Even in the face of wartime restrictions and curtailments, our press has risen to new heights of service. In a world that is on the march, it has kept us allerted to trends and realisms. On its pages will be found explanations of the tremendous determination and application of the people, and on those same pages will always be found encouragement for a central community effort and assumption of civilian responsibility.

"With these thoughts in mind, I, Earl Warren, governor of California, take this occasion to commend the daily and weekly newspapers of California for the many and splendid public services performed during the months our nation has been at war and do hereby urge that further public recognition be given the truisms that 'without a free press there can be no democracy.'

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this 27th day of September, A.D. 1944.

EARL WARREN
Governor of California

Body, Long Lost Flier, Found in Laguna Mountains

Ocean Beach folks, generally, and those of Loma Portal in particular were interested to learn this week that the body of Ens. Louis M. Winn, Jr., and his plane, both of which had been lost for 31 months in the Laguna mountains, were found by a searching party last week in a barren canyon 12 miles west of Salton Sea and 25 miles south of Indio according to a report of the 11th Naval district office. Ens. Winn was 27 and the son of Dr. and Mrs. Louis M. Winn, now residing on Dove st., San Diego. The family lived in the Loma Portal section of Ocean Beach for 9½ years.

Navy and Marine airmen, led by Lt.- Comm. James F. Patterson, found the wreckage of the plane and the body nearby, also the body of Ens. Wm. Page, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Page of Ontario.

Flier Patterson, who had been the last man to see Winn's missing plane, Feb. 14, 1942 had recently been transferred to Brown field near San Diego after a period of combat duty in the Pacific, had renewed search for the long lost plane and had sighted what he believed to be wreckage of the plane. Patterson, poined by three marines and a navydoctor, flew to Clark dry lake and proceeded into the area on foot.

Only Patterson and Marine Capt. M. B. Miller were able to reach the wreckage. Both men used up their water and became exhausted.

Patterson strained his ankles but was able to make his way back to his plane. Miller was unable to return unaided and was rescued by a second navy search party.

Ensigns Winn and Page disappeared Feb. 14, 1942, while flying from San Diego with Patterson and one other plane on a volunteer search mission for a group of planes which was overdue at San Diego and believed lost in a snowstorm over the Lagunas.

"I glanced back once and saw their plane, but when I looked back two minutes later, it was gone," Patterson recalled yesterday.

"There was a ridge next to us and I assumed that their plane was searching on the other side of it. I was running short of gasoline and finaly radioed that I was going in to Palm Springs to refuel. Page and Winn could receive me but could not transmit to me from their plane."

When the missing plane did not arrive at Palm Springs, Patterson organized an unsuccessful search, and later spent most of his spare time flying over the area in a hunt for the lost craft.

Participating in the initial hunt were Indians from a nearby resvation, army calvarymen from Camp Seely, in the Imperial valley, rangers, state guardsmen and many civilians.

Subseuently Ens. Winn's father continued a lonely search of his own for the plane, offered a $500 reward to anyone finding it and as recently as last December urged deer hunters to be on the lookout.

"We long ago have given up the idea that they may be alive in a remote section," he said at that time, "and our only desire now it to give the boys a funeral."

Ens. Winn was lost on the first anniversary of his being sworn in as an aviation cadet. He had attended San Diego High School and State college.

STATE-WIDE COMMITTEE ORGANIZING

ED W. BOLT
Chairman, Veterans' Home and Farm Committee.

Organization of a state-wide committee of volunteer California men and women, working in cooperation with members of the American Legion and Auxiliary, is being completed, to campaign for the passage of Proposition No. 1 on the November 7 state election ballot. The proposal provides a $30,000,000. bond issue for the purchase of homes and farms for Veterans of World War II. The measure is similar to the four bond issues overwhelmingly voted by the citizens of California, enabling over 19,000 U.S. service men and women of the first World War to acquire their own homes and farms. The Veterans' Welfare Board administered $89,000,000. on these loans, without costing the state, counties or taxpayers a single penny. The tremendous success of the program is nationally known, and many states have sought to pattern their present veterans' aid measures after it.

Ed W. Bolt of San Francisco, prominent California war veterans' leader, is general chairman of the state-wide committee being formed to work for the Veterans' Home and Farm Bond issue. The general committee will include representatives of civic, patriotic, fraternal, veterans, welfare, labor, business and community service organizations throughout California. Genera Chairman Bolt has announced the receipt at State headquarters of the Veterans' Farm and Home Committee, 1006 Merchants Exchange Building, San Francisco, of resolutions unanimously adopted by outstanding men and women's organizations representing several millions of members, warmly praising the plan, and urging its passage on November 7 by a tremendous majority.

"Adoption of Proposition No. 1 by the people of California will accord fitting recognition to the state's valiant service men and women, provide a sound investment in finance and security to the state and veterans, and assure an early re-establishment of California's World War II in family and community life," Chairman Bolt stated.

"The families of our service men and women are vitally interested in the future welfare of their loved ones, and acclaim this constructive program for California's returning veterans. To the families and friends of these legions of service men and women, we direct a special invitation to join the movement to help the American Legion and all patriotic groups achieve a virtually unanimous adoption of this worth-while measure on November 7."

For PEACE on the HOME FRONT

VOTE NO! on proposition No. 12

Governor Earl Warren, the State Chamber of Commerce, civic leaders and a score of employer, employee, civic, veteran and church groups have come forward to oppose No. 12 on the ballot in the election, November 7th. These leaders look upon No. 12 as a threat to industrial peace in California and as a dangerous attack on our united efforts to win the war.

If written into the constitution, this committee is convinced that this proposal entitled "The Right of Employment" would prove a powder keg. It would bring chaos, confusion, and industrial warfare. It would destroy peace on the home front.

Ostensibly designed to crush trade unions, No. 12 goes far afield. It threatens the present good will existing between labor and industry. It comes as an un-American attack on war production. California has plenty of wartime and post war problems. Why start a civil war on the home front?

Ocean Beach Man's Dolls to be Shown October 2 to 7

The ninth annual National Goodwill Doll show will be held at the San Diego Goodwill headquarters at 402 Fifth ave. from Monday, Oct. 2 through Oct. 7, Olin Gillespie, originator of the show, and manager of this year's exhibition, announces.

The public is cordially invited to view the 400 dolls, ranging from an 85-year-old French bisque doll, down to the most modern young lady. The exhibit will be open from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. There is no admission fee.

Gillespie said that one of the highlights of this year's exhibit will be the foreign division, featuring black stocking dolls from the the Fiji islands; cloth dolls from India, loaned by Dr. Frank R. Felt, 4475 Del Monte ave., a member of the local Goodwill board of directors, and others.

Mrs. Emma Clear, of Redondo Beach, considered a national authority on dolls, is expected to be here this week-end, and to be a guest of honor at the opening of the show. She sent down a rare Jenny Lind doll for the display.

The show, now a national project of the 100 Goodwills in the nation, was started by Gillespie at the 1936 Exposition here.

LEADERS INVITED

Mrs. Bertha Leadbeater, Ocean Beach, the assistant district leader of the local Civilian Defense set-up, plans to attend the monthly Central Committee meeting of the Women's Division of Civilian Defense, Oct. 4, starting at 10 a.m., in the Chamber of Commerce building on Broadway downtown, and announces that all block leaders and friends in the Ocean Beach community are invited to attend the meeting.

"There will be several interesting speakers," she says, and a film of "Russia at War," will be presented as a feature of the program.

Mrs. Elsie T. Steinruck of Mission Beach announces that she has purchased Jewel's beauty shop on Voltaire st. from Mrs. Jewel Mason and will take possession Oct. 1. Mrs. Mason, however, will remain to help the new owner for several weeks and will then go to Union City, Tenn. to visit her mother, Mrs. J. L. Gordon, the latter being ill.

"Never lonely of heart"

RECENTLY heard over the radio as an advertising slogan were the words, "Even in wartime, those who know they are loved are never lonely of heart." These words brought to a listener a significance deeper than doubtless had originally been intended by the company whose slogan they were.

"Even in wartime," the announcer had begun. Certainly, loneliness may seem acute to those stationed at remote outposts, assigned to uncongenial tasks, separated from the warmth of human companionship and the comforts of civilization. But, as the advertisers correctly pointed out, if even such as these "know they are loved," they are conscious of a certain heart-warming comfort, which in a measure antidotes their loneliness.

Recalling the Apostle John's assertion that God is Love, and contemplating Love's universality, we realize that none can be separated from the presence of Love—their Father, Mother, Minister, Physician, and "only real relative"—in all its tender ministerings. Love is truly present with earth's "lonely of heart."

To avail ourselves of this abiding presence necessitates the whole-hearted admission on our part that God is All to us. This does not mean a detached and cold turning away in our thinking from individuals. It only means the happy acknowledgment that God is All-in-all, and the according to Him of first place in our affections. The very admission is an effectual guard against loneliness of heart, for it indicates that we are beginning to free ourselves from dependence upon material circumstances.

In speaking of the angels of His presence, Mary Baker Eddy says in Miscellaneous Writings, pp. 306, 307, "It is not the clasping of hands, nor a loved person present; it is more than this: it is a spiritual idea that lights your path!" And she adds, "What a glorious inheritance is given to us through the understanding of omnipresent Love!"

If men insist upon believing that there is a power opposed to God, and that they are separated from Him by adverse human circumstances, they cannot feel the comfort and reassurance that radiate from the lighted path. Indeed, there will be only a dark and joyless path for those who are not looking to the divine source of all light for love and companionship. Christ Jesus said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 5:16). The natural, happy result of enjoying the light of the knowledge of God's presence is that others share this enlightened joy. Then those who have not yet claimed God's love for themselves and glimpsed their "glorious inheritance" of spiritual companionship will learn of His love.

That intrepid Christian, Paul, who for love of the Master's teachings exposed himself to all the opposition of the carnal mind, stated the result of his experiences decisively in a letter to the Romans. He wrote (Romans 8:38, 39), "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God." This Christian warrior, who journeyed into strange lands and dwelt in unfriendly cities, knew and proved, as we may today, that nothing can separate man from God's love.

So, whether we are alone in a big city or a vast country, surrounded or solitary, we can know that we are indeed loved, and therefore need never be "lonely of heart." Since infinite divine Love is our constant and satisfying companion, we can rest assured that from His healing presence and ministering love we can never be separated. — The Christian Science Monitor.

The Community Civic committee wishes to take this opportunity to express their gratitude and appreciation:

To all the residents of Ocean Beach who gladly gave their money to help build a Memorial Recreation center.

To all the civic and religious groups for their splendid spirit of cooperation and financial support.

To Fred Kraft who gave the first $1000, launching the campaign.

To Joe Lownes who not only gave the second $1000 but whose ideas and suggestions were also helpful.

To Milton Lancaster for his gift of $500 which did so much to inspire and encourage all of us to give as sacrificially and enthusiastically.

To Dr. A. Heid Sand and Dr. W. B. Oster, Jr., their donation $500 which made it possible for us to write a check for $7000 to the city.

To all the other local merchants who gave just as willingly and in the same spirit of civic improvement and progress.

To the residents of Ocean Beach, who, having no children of their own, were yet willing to contribute toward a "place to play" for other people's children.

To those who at first opposed the project, yet when adequately informed, donated their money to assist toward success.

To those who sold us the property for their willingness to do something for the community's betterment.

To our City Council, City Recreation Commission, and City Manager's office for their active interest, encouraging counsel, and financial support.

To all the workers and solicitors whose personal services in the promotional activities helped to make success possible.

MR. WINKLE GOES TO WAR

By THEODORE PRATT

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Forty-four-year-old Wilbert Winkle, who operates the Fixit repair shop, is notified by his draft board that he is in 1-A. He breaks the bad news to his domineering wife, Amy, who suddenly becomes very tender. Mr. Winkle is sent to Camp Squibb, where he graduates from Motor Mechanics school, and then goes home on a furlough. After the furlough Mr. Winkle finds himself, with his friend, Mr. Tinker, in a big convoy. They land on the island of Talizo, where they meet several old pals. One day the Japs come. Mr. Winkle dives under a command car while Mr. Tinker shoots it out with a plane. Mr. Tinker is hit, Mr. Winkle grabs a machine gun and mows down the Japs.

CHAPTER XIII

As he aimed, the officer was passing Mr. Tinker. To Mr. Winkle's amazement, one of Mr. Tinker's legs moved out and tripped the man, sending him sprawling. Mr. Tinker's jump at him was more of a crawl, but he made it before the Jap could fire his pistol.

The hairy hands of Mr. Tinker found the officer's throat. They held on while the two rolled on the ground. Gradually the Jap's convulsive movements stopped and he lay still. Mr. Tinker continued to retain his grasp on the other's throat, viselike, even when, in turn, there was no more movement from him.

Mr. Winkle turned back to his main business.

He felt no shock when he saw more assault boats coming out of the mist in addition to the two now beaching themselves. He had only the determined desire to kill and must be overpowered.

He wasn't aware that other men, live men, were in the fox hole with him.

He didn't hear, above the noise of his gun, the trucks grinding to a stop in back of him with a shriek of brakes. For some time he wasn't aware that other men, live men, were in the fox hole with him and that still more were firing from the sand for some distance on either side.

He didn't know when he left the fox hole and with the others ran upon the beach with a rifle in his hands. He was astounded, once, to note the bayonet on the end of the rifle, and that he had plunged it into a Jap soldier and was having difficulty in getting it out. Twist, he thought, that was it. He twisted, and the blade came free. It was true what they said.

He felt a sharp sting in his left shoulder.

On top of his head there was a blinding clang.

His helmet was knocked off.

Something crashed on his bare head and after that he was aware of nothing.

Mr. Winkle opened his eyes cautiously. He had been conscious for a few minutes, but he couldn't place where he was.

The first thing he saw was the face of Jack Pettigrew. Jack had only a head, which floated in the air all by itself. The mouth in the head said, "Hello, Pop."

"So you made it, too," observed Mr. Winkle.

" 'Made it?' " Jack's head inquired.

"We're dead, aren't we?" asked Mr. Winkle. "You were dead the last time I saw you. This is Heaven, I suppose. Or is it—?" In some panic he demanded, "Which one?"

The head laughed. "We're in an Army hospital just outside of Los Angeles."

The rest of Jack came into focus. Clad in pajamas and a bathrobe, he was sitting on the edge of a white bed. There were lines of white beds.

"I don't understand," Mr. Winkle said. "We're supposed to be on Talizo. You—and the Japs . . ."

"The Japs," Jack grinned, "didn't get anywhere. We've taken the whole island since then. You saved it. You're a hero. You're going to get a medal. The President told about you in one of his speeches."

"And look at these papers." Jack rummaged in a locker between the beds and then held the front pages of newspapers so Mr. Winkle could read them. One of them was The Evening Standard. Mr. Winkle took it and saw big black letters which said:

WINKLE, HERO OF TALIZO

"I'm supposed to call the nurse if you wake up," Jack said. "You've been out for five weeks. You're not supposed to talk."

"You do the talking," Mr. Winkle ordered. "And lots of it."

"You don't have to worry," Jack said. "Mrs. Winkle knows. I went home to see my folks. I'm here now only for a check-up before I join my new company. We're headed for the Philippines this time."

"You left out something," Mr. Winkle said. "The most important part. The Alphabet, Freddie, and the others . . ."

In a low voice, Jack said, "I was the only one."

It was a moment before he could ask about Mr. Tinker. Then he spoke only his name.

"No," Jack told him.

At least, thought Mr. Winkle. Mr. Tinker had got his Jap himself. He would always cherish thinking of the sight of Mr. Tinker with his hands around the Japanese officer's throat.

"That's why I want to go back," Jack said.

"I'm going, too," Mr. Winkle told him.

Mr. Winkle enjoyed, instead of shying from, every moment of his reception when he arrived in Springville. He beamed at the huge crowd waiting at the station. With satisfaction, he saw and heard the American Legion band which had turned out for him alone this time. He read the banners and posters people carried. He admired the decorations, one of which read unashamedly: "Our Hero."

There was Amy embracing him and murmuring brokenly, "Wilbert . . . Wilbert . . ."

"Look," he said. Right there before all the people he lifted his arm to shoulder height, telling Amy, "That's as far as it will go."

Amy stared at him, embarrassed and stricken. The crowd hushed.

"It's good enough for holding you," Mr. Winkle told his wife, putting his arm around her.

The crowd roared its approval, while Amy, blushing, whispered to him, "Wilbert, you're changed more than ever."

The Mayor stepped up and gave him the keys to the city, in the form of a large wooden key painted gold and festooned with gay ribbons.

Then came the most important part of the ceremony, the part that made Mr. Winkle most appreciative and brought a lump to his throat.

His own commanding officer being some distance away, it had been arranged for the Colonel who commanded the camp where Mr. Winkle was inducted into the Army to present him with the Distinguished Service Cross.

The Colonel read the citation from a scroll. ". . . awarded to Wilbert George Winkle . . . distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy . . . beyond and above his duty . . ."

The Colonel pinned the medal on his tunic, stepped back and saluted him. Mr. Winkle was so surprised at being saluted first by an officer, and especially one of such rank as a Colonel, that he forgot to salute back. Instead, he found himself shaking hands with the Colonel.

In the Mayor's car, with the Mayor in front and Mr. Winkle and a weepy Amy alone in the back seat, they paraded through the town to the blaring accompaniment of the band and cheering people who threw a great many bits of paper from the buildings. Mr. Winkle waved and waved his good arm, and it was borne in upon him that it was most men's dream come true, notably because this time no one called out derisively.

Finally they were deposited in front of their house, where a number of people were gathered. Among them was Mr. Wescott, who had evidently come out to see for himself. And having seen, he didn't find any reason to laugh now. He couldn't say anything at all when he opened his mouth in that endeavor, but simply stood there with his lips parted, gaping.

Mr. Winkle greeted him warmly and shook hands before going on with Amy up their walk.

Mr. Onward, the reportographer, whom Mr. Winkle had seen at the station taking pictures, followed them up the walk. "Listen," Mr. Onward asked rather humbly, "how about an interview?"

"No," said Mr. Winkle, "no interview."

"But—" Mr. Onward began to plead.

"Use the same one you printed before." Mr. Winkle suggested. "That was a good one."

Alone together in their house, Mrs. Winkle dabbed at her eyes with her

The Colonel pinned the medal on his tunic.

handkerchief, touched his medal with one finger, dabbed some more, and asked, "Whoever would have thought—?"

"Not me," said Mr. Winkle.

"Not I," she corrected. She spoke a little sharply, as if trying to hide her emotions or expressing a desire to bring him down a peg in case his popularity might have gone to his head.

In trying to determine which it was, Mr. Winkle saw the answer to his speculation on whether or not Amy would continue in her new regard for him, or revert to the old. He found a number of things to support his belief that war had changed her as permanently as it had him.

She would not find it comfortable to henpeck a national hero.

[THE END]

THE POSTWAR FURNACE

The postwar world is going to give a break to the man who tends a furnace. The job is going to be no more trouble than switching the dial on a radio.

—*—

The furnace of tomorrow will not take up much more room than an electric toaster.

—*—

Science and engineering, with all their wonders, have neglected the furnace. It is what it has always been, a huge, cumbersome, awesome, space-hogging apparatus full of temperament. That frustrated, broken look on the faces of countless Americans is due to furnace responsibilities.

—*—

Shaking it down and removing the ashes has made many a man hate cellars, northern winters and the discoverer of coal.

—*—

But at last something has been done about it, and a furnace perfected that will be a thing of beauty and joy all winter. It is heralded as a robot-heatwave, a jet-heater, a jeep furnace.

—*—

You can carry it home under your arm.

—*—

Its special appeal is that it leaves no ashes, has no grate, requires no shaking and is as self-operating as an oil burner.

—*—

It is, in fact, the coal industry's answer to the oil furnace. The oil industry has been battering the coal industry around for years without getting much opposition, but a battle is ahead.

—*—

The Anthracite Industries incorporated is the popper of the new demi tasse self-operating furnace. It only takes up a space two feet by two feet and is a simple device consisting of a couple of gears, a blower, a water pump and some blades which chop up the coal as it is automatically fed into the fire box.

—*—

It produces a terrific flame in a few seconds and is guaranteed to have mom yelling "Turn off that heat!" instead of squawking "Horace, you'd better look at the furnace again. You opened the drafts two hours ago and nothing's happened yet."

—*—

There is practially no cleaning to be done. The old man can give it an annual renovating with an old tooth brush, a nail file and an eye dropper.

—*—

It will be in production as soon as Hitler and Tojo are disposed of.

—*—

Swell! Now we have the furnace of the future all attended to.

—*—

But how can we get the coal of the present?

Private Purkey Nears the Reich

Dear Harriet—

Well, I am not sure where I am now on account of the armies in France don't stop long enough even to look at the signposts, but if I ain't in Germany I am close. Uncle Sam has got a new secret weapon. It is a jet-propelled G. I. We are moving so fast, Harriet, that windshields should now be compulsory equipment for foot soldiers.

I would not be able to write this letter except we have just slowed down to 30 miles an hour. I don't know what we slowed down for but Sergeant Mooney says it was on account of we had to send some scouts about 100 miles to locate General Patton.

—*—

It has been almost like a sightseeing tour with me the last few weeks and I seen a thousand places where Hitler once slept and most of the towns where the Nazi supermen once stood. It looks to me like the Kraut is the fastest folding soldier in history.

—*—

I seen thousands of captured Nazis in the last couple of weeks and I ain't seen a goosestep in a a carload. Anybody who says Germany will never surrender on our terms is nuts. The ones I been seeing will surrender for a drink of water and a cool place to lay down.

—*—

This liberation business is nice but it is too fast for comfort. I would rather of liberated a little slower so we could get time to buy at least a postcard in some of them famous French and Belgium places. But if a G. I. stops to tie his shoe lace here becomes AWOL.

All my love, Oscar.

"Officials of the New York stock exchange announce that the spreading of rumors about stocks must be stopped."—News item.

Wanna bet?

—*—

Imagine stopping rumors on the stock exchange! Lots of people won't buy a stock unless a few rumors are thrown in with it. "It's all I ever get for my money," complained Elmer Twitchell today. "If I must choose between stocks and rumors, gimme rumors."

This Man Just Didn't Appreciate Her First Aid

She was on her way home from a first aid course when she saw a man lying prone in the middle of the sidewalk. His face was cradled in one arm; the other arm was twisted under him in a peculiar position. All alert she was, and without a moment's hesitation got down on her knees and went to work. Here was her opportunity to prove herself.

For a few minutes there was no response, then the victim spoke up. "Lady," he said, "I don't know what you're doing, but I wish you'd quit tickling me. I'm trying to hold a lantern for this fellow down in the manhole, and he's got a fiery temper."

THIS IS NO DREAMED-UP HEADLINE—no "tone poem" conceived on an inspired typewriter. It's the way the army explains the command "Fix bayonets—charge!" Only the Infantry has it put to them in these words. As one doughboy said:

"I'll remember those eleven words the rest of my life."

Remember? How can he forget them? They describe the climax of the Infantryman's assault—they describe the most cold-blooded action on a battlefield. Yet Infantry officers and men have advanced, countless times, to kill or be killed . . . at Saratoga . . . at New Orleans . . . the Argonne . . . New Guinea . . . Salerno. There's no rescinding of this order—no retreating—no nothing but plain killing.

Right now, the men of the Infantry are closing in for the final kill. They're advancing every day—advancing to the order of "kill or be killed." Remember this the next time you see a doughboy on furlough. Remember this the next time you almost forget to write that letter. Remember it till your dying day. You can't pay the doughboy back—but at least you can be forever mindful of his role in this fight for freedom.

"Keep your eye on the Infantry—THE DOUGHBOY DOES IT!"

Odd People of Belgian Congo Are 'S' Shaped

The smallest known race in the world, the Akka-Negrillos of the Belgian Congo, Africa, are only four and a half feet tall. They have an extremely protruding stomach, the back curving in so that the body takes the outline of an S.

Very long arms and short legs, bent inward, and protruding lips add to the odd appearance of these people.

Rats Fish With Tails

Rats on the uninhabited and barren atolls off New Guinea subsist entirely on crabs, which they catch by the unique method of dangling their tails in the water from the edge of a flat rock. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Consumption of reclaimed rubber in the United States increased more than 50 per cent from 1940 to 1943. Reclaimed rubber may frequently be used in the manufacture of the same articles from which it was reclaimed.

In 1943 gasoline and motor vehicle tax revenues combined accounted for nearly 30 per cent of the total state revenues.

Next year will mark the thirtieth anniversary of the use of motor vehicles in the rural free delivery mail service. Rubber-tired mail cars had a bearing on the passing of the first federal aid highway law in 1916.

Book Reviews and Forums Decided on By Women's Group

Women of the literature department of the Woman's club decided on a 1944-5 agenda of book reviews by individuals and group forums on pertinent questions of the day at their first meeting of the new club year, held at the Woman's clubhouse at 2160 Bacon st. Monday evening.

Mrs. R. J. Long, chairman of the department, presided and led an interesting and general discussion, asking for suggestions on the way the group would like to carry on their study and meetings this year. The attendance was unusually large, showing that there are many women here who are interested in the literature activity of the club.

Refreshments were served at the close of the evening at an attractively arranged tea table presided over by Mrs. Long, Mrs Julia McGarvey and Miss Iva Marshall.

WEDDING OF BILL ANDRE AND OAKLAND GIRL ON SEPTEMBER 3 ANNOUNCED

The Chapel of the Chimes at Piedmont, Calif. was the nuptial setting where Miss Elizabeth Jeanne From, daughter of the socially prominent Mrs. Jeanne From, of Oakland, became the bride of Edward William Andre, BM 1/c U.S.N., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lajoie, 4975 Del Monte, Ocean Beach. Rev. William H. Solly of the St. Marks Evangelical church read the impressive double ring service Sept 3.

Alex Bertelson sang "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly." The bride was given in marriage by Ray Baird and was gowned in white satin fashioned on Empire lines with trained skirt. She wore a finger tip veil and carried a white bible adorned with a white orchid and streaming bouvardia.

The maid of honor, Miss Margy Green, and the bridesmaids, Miss Shirley Dahl and Mrs. Margaret Robins, sister of the groom, wore gowns of powder blue lace and net and carried contrasting bouquet of roses and snapdragons with matching flowers in their hair.

The little flower girls, Marion Bairrd and JoAnn Skaaren, daughters of Louise and Ray Baird and Molly and Ed Skaaren, wore long dresses of pink net trimmed in a profusion of small powder blue ribbon bows.

Dalton W. Martin, AMM2/c, from Arkansas, was best man. Ushers were Johnny Bowman, ACMM, from Pennsylvania and Jimmy Gallant, GM2/c, from Massachusetts, all of the U. S. Navy. Mr. Martin served many months in the south Pacific with Mr. Andre.

Mrs. From entertained with a reception and wedding dinner at the Hotel Claremont where dinner was served for 100 guests. Besides the bride's parent, the groom's parents and the wedding party friends were represented from the Rebekah lodge, the Danish lodge and the Key System of Oakland. Milton Y. Adcock was toastmaster. Mrs. From received in a gown of pale blue lace and net. Mrs. Lajoie chose wine colored lace and crepe.

The bride and groom will reside in Oakland while the groom is stationed at Alameda.

The bride is a member of the Rebekah lodge and her white Bible was presented to her upon receiving her "Majority" degree from the Theta Roh girls club of which she is a past president. She also is a member of the Danish lodge and a graduate of Oakland high school. Mr. Andre's home is Ocean Beach and he is a graduate of Point Loma high school. He spent 28 months in the south Pacific and is a veteran of three major battles and returned home in August.

Mr. and Mrs. Lajoie and daughter Mrs. Margaret Robins motored to Oakland for the wedding.

A girlie whose name doesn't matter
Found herself getting fatter and fatter,
She dieted so strictly
She began to get sickly;
Now there isn't a place you can patter.
